

ON SATURDAY NIGHT.

O, what happens on Saturday night—
Some go flirting and some get tight;
Some to market and some to shows,
Some where music in softness flows,
Some where glasses are clinking clear
Some where shadows are dark and drear.
Some to gladness and some to blight—
O, what happens on Saturday night?

O, what happens when toll is done
Until the rising of Monday's sun
Some with music of heartbeats wild Go out walking with little child,
Some come over the river to see
The city bright with its lights of glee;
Some go down to the busy ships,
All aboard for the homeward trips,
Bearing them off to the homes of light—
O, what happens on Saturday night?

O, what happens when all stir
By holiday music and every breast
Sweetens down to the dream of rest;
Some so merry and some so sad,
Some so noble and some so bad,
Some to dancing and some to tears,
O, what happens through all the years!

Then Our "New Peoria" Is What You Want

It has perfect working discs, fitted with dust proof chilled bearings, single draw bars that will not gather trash, staggered spoke wheels with 7-inch hub and 3-inch tires, continuous rear bar with truss rod to support seat and keep drill from sagging, direct pressure in rear of disc; a feature we claim will make this drill work perfectly in any land suitable for sowing grain and where other drills cannot be operated. A seat in center of drill convenient to lever is also furnished. Drop in and let us show you what this drill can do, and furnish you with the names of a score of satisfied users. One feature of our drill that puts it in a class by itself and makes it superior to all other drills on the market is the "Peoria Disc Shoe." You won't find the disc shoe on any other press drill on earth, the Peoria people have that feature cinched and they are going to hang on to it. If you want to know why we can grow more wheat to the acre after this drill than any other with the same amount of grain sown, come in and let us explain to you the
"New Peoria Disc Shoe Drill."

Badly Injured

Ban Middleman, son of Samuel Middleman, dealer in scrap iron and such like, was painfully injured Thursday about 4 o'clock in a runaway. He was driving along Front street when his horse became frightened at a pass-

AND SOUGHT GOLD IN '40Notable Career of Jabez Manchester
Hardy New EnglanderNew Bedford (Mass.) Republican Standard.

Jabez Manchester, a well known farmer of South Westport, died at his late home Thursday at the age of 88 years, eight months and 13 days. Until his last illness, he retained his strength and vitality to a remarkable degree and his mind was as clear as in youth. Mr.
Manchester carried on farming, although not so extensively as in former years.

He was born in Tiverton, R. I., on February 27th, 1821.

Owing to his wonderful memory, he was able to relate interesting incidents of his life, as he made several whaling voyages and spent several years among the gold fields of California.

He made two voyages to California, via Cape Horn and returned home with a goodly stock of gold.

Mr. Manchester had five children—Everett
L. Manchester of Maysville, Ky., Miss Della
M. Manchester of Fall River; Mrs. Pardon A.
Gifford, Mrs. Edmund G. Gifford and Arthur J.
Manchester, all of South Westport.

Jabez Manchester, Sr., father of the late Jabez was a soldier in war of 1812 and he has a record unsurpassed for bravery.

AT HIGH NOON

Today Miss Lydia Ruth Power Becomes the Wife of Mr. William Glenn Prather

The residence of Dr. and Mrs. Edwin Mathews, in East Third street, this city, at high noon today will be the theater of a beautiful October wedding, when Mrs. Mathews's sister, Miss Lydia Ruth Power of Flemings-burg, becomes the bride of Mr. William Glenn Prather of Pensacola, Florida.

The hospitable Mathews home is now aglow with mellow lights, giving the midday an evening effect which is very beautiful, and combined with the decorations of dahlias, autumn leaves and the color-scheme of white and yellow, make a fairy-like setting for the coming wedding.

THE CEREMONY.

Rev. T. C. Stackhouse of the Baptist Church, Lexington, will be the officiating minister.

Ribbons bearers: Masters Church Mathews,
Edwin Prather, J. Edwin Mathews and Mitchell Mathews.

Flower girls: Misses Alice Kerr Hood, and Carroll Mathews.

Attendants: Mrs. Virginia Turner, Matron of Honor; Miss Harriette Dudley Hawkins, Maid of Honor. The bride will be given away
by her brother, Mr. Joseph Power. Dr. R. M.
Skinner will be the groom's best man.

Present Mr. R. L. Hoffsch.

After a delightful luncheon following the ceremony, reception and congratulations, Mr.
and Mrs. Prather will take the 3:17 C. & O.
Flyer, No. 3 and journey to their future home in Pensacola, where the blessings and united good wishes of their legion of relatives and friends will abide with them.

Among the out-of-town guests to be present are the following: Mr. Joseph Power of Chicago; Mr. George Bush and family, Gallipolis, O.; Mrs. John Hawkins, Miss Harriette Dudley Hawkins, Mrs. Virginia Turner and Miss Alice Kerr Hood of Flemingsburg, and Mr.

A Wauegan lady who has tried one reports that old bachelors do not make good husbands, because they are too firmly "set" in their ways. This only proves the correctness of the theory that the lady who expects to have a satisfactory husband must catch him and train him early.

The government is said to have discovered a way of making imperishable bread. It may be very scientific, but it will probably set people to longing for the bread which the mothers of the nation used to make, and which was never allowed to get to the stage where its imperishability had a chance of being proved.

Airmen seem to be working on the wrong end of the problem. They should not seek to discover how fast they can go but should try to see how they can render flight.

NEW SENSATION FOR GREAT WHITE WAY

IN the matinee crowd on Broadway, New York, the other day Miss Osterman appeared with a real live white dove perched on her hat. Miss Osterman declared that the bird was a dove, but many rudely remarked that it was only a pigeon. At Longacre square the bird nearly blew both hat and bird off the small head of the lady.

SETS SHOE FASHION

Footwear of United States Standard for Universe.

Backward Evolution in Foot Covering Puts the Wearer Behind the Ancients in Walking Ability—Has Many Defects.

New York.—Everybody wears shoes at least one size too small, it is asserted, and with toes too narrow. This gives room for only the great toe to grow and perform its functions, but compresses the other toes until the smallest one is a mere scrap. The foot of man spread like an animal's paw with every step he takes. This is impossible in a shoe which "fits" the foot.

Walter C. Taylor, editor-in-chief of the Boot and Shoe Recorder, says: "The greatest waste in shoe buying is one for which the consumer himself is largely responsible. It comes through the buying of shoes which are poorly fitted."

We not only wear our shoes too small and our heels too high, but we allow fashion to influence us, and there is a constant demand for change in style and material; a demand which the manufacturers supply abundantly." Mr. Taylor says that it would be worth millions to the trade and to the consumer if this could be righted by a common sense view of our foot covering. Of course the women are blamed for the greater part of this extravagance, for a dainty foot has long been considered more to be desired. Gradually shoes have developed into things of beauty merely and we buy them with the thought of their appearance and not of their use. In fact, Americans, as a rule, do not expect to walk great distances.

It seems that the development of the shoe-maker's art is in inverse ratio to the development of the foot, for here in America our feet are notoriously undeveloped, and yet America leads the world in the making of shoes. Almost everything else in the way of wearing apparel depends more or less on foreign importations, but America influences the shoe styles of England, Germany and France, and American methods are standard for the world.

American supremacy in shoemaking is due largely to specialization. A shoe operative does half a dozen different things; here he performs one simple process, and here also one factory makes one kind of shoe. If a large manufacturer makes different kinds of shoes he has a separate factory for each kind.

What a sight the modern shoe factory would be to the primitive shoe-maker of colonial days, who was an itinerant workman, carried his tools with him and stayed with the farmer long enough to make up the farmer's supply of home tanned leather into shoes enough to last until his next annual visit. His last was roughly whittled out of a piece of wood to suit the largest foot in the family, and then pared down for the successive sizes. He sat on a low bench, one end of which was divided into compartments where his awls, hammers, knives and rasps were kept, with his pots of paste and blacking, his palls, thread, linings and buttons, "shoulder sticks" and "run sticks."

With all of our wonderful machinery we produce shoes which are not so good for our feet, as the most primitive and simplest of foot coverings, the sandal, which is considered ideal by those who appreciate the beauty of the human foot and wish to preserve it. The sandal was worn by the ancient Egyptians and Greeks and the "shoes" of the Bible were sandals. The same type is still worn by the peoples of Central Asia, India, Japan and China.

The Indian moccasin, which extends over the top of the foot, but has the sole and main part in one piece, is one of the best of foot coverings, soft, flexible and durable. Out of a combination of these two the sole without an upper and the upper without a sole the modern shoe has been evolved.

HAS RIGHT TO KILL?

French Woman Writers Discuss Case of Mme. Bloch.

Six to Two Against Woman Who Shot Her Rival—Various Opinions on Crimes of Passion and Literature.

Paris.—Some French woman authors have been giving their views on the right of their sex to kill. Their opinions are based on the case of Mme. Bloch, who wrote books signed with the name of Frederic de Benneville and who shot and killed Mrs. Bridgeman, who had won M. Bloch's affections. From the prison Mme. Bloch announced that she had received "innumerable letters of congratulation" and that many of them came from her sister authors. The suggestion that woman writers sympathized with Mme. Bloch's act moved L. Miroir to make an inquiry. Of the eight women of letters who gave their opinion only two supported Mme. Bloch's action. The first of this minority, Mme. Marie de Voret, writes: "Although murder inspired by jealousy is repugnant to all in principle, nothing is more difficult to judge in the various forms it may take. The best thing, it seems to me, is to treat it with charity, thinking that before a woman's hand could seize a weapon there must have been suffering enough to constitute presumptive explanation."

Mme. Aurel, the other supporter of Mme. Bloch, writes: "If a rival had dared to set me at defiance I believe that I should have done as Mme. Bloch did. It is none the less a misfortune." As for the six woman writers who condemn Mme. Bloch's crime, more than one finds that a desire for self-advertisement, a feeling that the action would boom her books, had some influence on her mind. Mme. Daniel Lesauve, the best known writer of the eight quoted, says: "I hold that he who kills ought to accept death; otherwise he is the most cowardly of beings. On this condition only can vengeance be clothed with any grandeur." Mme. Jeanne Lanture would have a law passed that, except in cases of self defense, no acquittal should be allowed when a death has been caused. She casts doubts on the sincerity of all persons who look for advertisement in their profession.

Mme. Jane Catulle Meade, widow of the poet and dramatist, believes that love may cause a crime of passion, but cannot in any way excuse them. "I do not see that modern literature is a factor in multiplying these acts of savagery which seem to me to have their origin in feebleness of hearts and feebleness of the code."

Mme. Rachide argues that "to commit the crime which was the motive of the second crime required two people; then why kill the woman and spare the man? Because she loved her husband, the father of her children? If that was so ought to have been forgiven. Literature has a broad back. A true lover of letters would have had the wit to fire in the air, if his form of advertisement was absolutely necessary."

Mme. Valentine de Saint-Point, the lecturer on "Futurism," has no sympathy with lenient verdicts in crimes of passion. She says: "A person who pretends to be acting without consciousness of what he is doing or under the influence of madness is a much greater social danger than a conscious criminal, and as an individual much more insignificant."

Mme. Andree Cortis is unbelievably against Mme. Bloch. She says: "I cannot understand love that has no dignity, love that thrusts itself upon and clings to its object, not this extraordinary idea of longing to keep a man who flees from you, even if scandal, force and murder are necessary to hold him."

WOULD GIVE GIRLS TRAINING

Dusseldorf Professor Advocates Compulsory Military Service for Women.

Berlin.—Compulsory military service for German girls is advocated by Professor Witzel of Dusseldorf. An army of nurses should, in his opinion, follow each army of male combatants, not only to care for the wounded, but to attend to everything connected with food and clothing.

Every healthy German girl, says the professor, should look on training for this object as a patriotic duty, and the knowledge will be useful in the home if it is not utilized on the battlefield.

The God who gave us life gave us liberty at the same time. Do we always use it rightly?

Be useful where thou livest, that they both wait and wish thy pleasing presence still.

It's no easy matter to overcome a habit of self-depreciation, but by daily striving it can be done.

TIMELY TOPICS

There is a fault that is always attributed to women—that of never being on time.

No woman can afford to be a moment late if she expects to be called businesslike.

Tending to the little time appointments is the training that enables you to keep the big ones.

Business today will not wait for anybody. It is always progressing—always a few steps ahead.

You might be extraordinarily brilliant and capable of putting a deal through that requires brain and mettle and personal charm and knowledge, and all the other traits that go to make a successful worker, but if you lack one thing—the ability to be on time, you might as well be without these qualities.

THE MAN BEHIND THE BLIND

Uneasy lies the head that wears a straw hat.

WHY SHE LOST HER FRIENDS

She was not loyal to them.

She measured them by their ability to advance her.

She was always saying mean things about them in their absence.

She did not know the value of thoughtfulness in little things.

She was cold and reserved in her manner—cranky, gloomy, pessimistic.

She never thought it worth while to spend time in keeping up her friend ships.

Earliest Record of Coal in America.

The earliest record of coal in America is by Father Hennepin, in his "New Discovery of a Vast Country in America," published in London, 1698. A "coal-mine" had been discovered on the Illinois river near the present city of Ottawa. The first coal working was in the Richmond (Va.) coal fields about 1750.

IDEAS FOR HOME BUILDERS

BY WM. A. RADFORD.

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 178 West Jackson boulevard, Chicago, Ill., and only enclose two-cent stamp for reply.

This is one of the best low-cost houses ever built. It is medium in size as well as in cost—a sort of compromise between the large house, large rooms, and high ceilings of twenty or thirty years ago and the little, narrow, contracted, close-companion affairs that are being built in order to save expense because of the high price of all building materials. The size on the ground is 26 1/2 feet in width by 44 1/2 feet long, which is six or eight feet longer than most new city houses that are built on this general plan.

There are fashions in houses the same as in other things. Some of the fashions are all right, but some are nothing but silly fads. One of these late fashions is the dining-room extension, which is built something after the fashion of a bay window, but is very much wider and has square corners. Sometimes these extensions have windows in the ends, but in such cases they have the appearance of being overdone. Such an addition to a dining room is intended to let in an abundance of light, as well as to add to the appearance of the room, and is one of the most commendable new building features.

In some of these extensions the windows are placed high up; but there is an advantage in the deep window, especially if you want to use the space for a window seat. When the windows come low down, a wide seat may be built just a little below the window sills, which, if carefully upholstered, makes a very pleasant lounging place both in winter and in summer. These extensions must be very carefully built and thoroughly paneled, and the paper must be very carefully put on so as not to leave any cracks for the wind to blow through. Where you have so much glass surface, the radiation of heat goes on very rapidly. For comfort in using such a window seat a little careful attention when building is especially valuable. You would hunt a long time before finding another such a dining room in a low-cost house. The room is 12 by 13 1/2 feet, but is larger than the size indicates, because of the large china closet and the extra large pantry, where a great many things that are commonly kept in the dining room will find more convenient places. In fact, it is not absolutely necessary to have a sideboard in this dining room.

Second Floor Plan.

severe cases have been cured by leaving the window in the sleeping room open day and night. When people get to understand the value of fresh air we shall have better ventilated houses. In the meantime, if we can smuggle in a couple of extra fuses like this, we may be able to save some lives without anybody knowing it.

The front hall is no larger than necessary. It is shut off from outdoors by a vestibule with double doors, so that it may be kept warm. Each bedroom has two clothes closets—something that is unusual, but an improvement that will be appreciated. Another splendid feature is the size of the bathroom. For a hundred years people have been learning to pay more attention to bathrooms. There was a time when Americans actually felt ashamed of having a bathroom in the house. It was generally a little affair just big enough to get into; and it was placed in the most inconvenient part of the house, and, if it had a window at all, it was a little nine-inch affair set up almost out of reach. However, as people become better educated, they are appreciating more and more the advantages of a bathroom for health and comfort. One important consideration in arranging a bathroom is to have it over or near the kitchen, so that the same pipes that supply water to the tub and washstand will supply the kitchen sink; and the same rule works in regard to the waste-pipes. It not only effects a saving in first cost, but it is better for several other reasons. The shorter the pipes are, the better they will work; and the more condense the space, the more easily they are kept from freezing in the winter time.

First Floor Plan.

Of course, a sideboard looks well in any dining room; and, if you want it, there is room between the two doors or on the side against the kitchen.

The use of a dining room in a house like this depends very much on how the living room is furnished. Living rooms are used for general purposes more than ever before; so much so that the world "parlor" has almost gone out of use in some sections of the country. But there are women yet who want a parlor or a living room so elaborately furnished that no one feels comfortable in it. It is in just such houses that the more ordinary dining room comes in for a great deal of solid family enjoyment, and this is one reason why a good, comfortable window seat in this dining room projection would be appreciated. The fireplace, being opposite the big window, makes a combination that for convenience and luxurious comfort is hard to beat.

One great advantage in this house is the large central chimney. A chimney is worth a great deal more than four flues—one for the kitchen Innocence of Kittens. An English naturalist has raised the question whether kittens are born with a propensity to eat mice. Three Manx kittens kept in a cage for six weeks with a mouse, which was introduced when they were five months old, made no attempt to injure it, although they were hungry, until the mother cat was introduced and showed the mice should be treated. More than one observer has noted the disposition of kittens to attack mice, but the question whether mouse-killing is instinctive or educational with them can hardly be said to have been settled.

AD. RESTORES AN HEIRLOOM

Picked Up in Waiting Room of a Street Railway by Employee and Returned.

Milwaukee.—The only lost doll ever advertised for in Milwaukee papers has been found. The doll has been a heirloom in the family of Mrs. Charles Brichta of No. 1094 Fifth street for thirty years.

Mrs. Brichta's little niece, Anna Mae Wackermann, Delray, Fla., lost the doll in the street railway company waiting-room. The child was heartbroken. Mrs. Brichta was also grieved over the loss of her girlhood "baby." She advertised the loss.

An employee found the doll where the girl had dropped it. He turned it in at the cigar stand. The "ad." was read and the doll returned.

Mrs. H. Wackermann, her sister, Miss Hazel Wackermann, and Mrs. Wackermann's five-year-old daughter are visiting Mrs. Wackermann's sister, Mrs. Brichta, today.

GUADALAJARA'S DOOM is NEAR

GUADALAJARA

from the EAST

BECAUSE the crater of a boiling, seething volcano is directly beneath this city of 150,000 souls in all probability Guadalajara, which is the state capital of Jalisco, will be moved to a point some distance from what scientists say is to be one of the most active volcanoes on the entire American continent. The subterranean volcano has caused 240 earthquakes in the last three months. Twice, once in July and once in August, the shocks became so heavy that they practically depopulated the city for nearly a week on each occasion.

Seven scientists headed by Prof. Ramon Leon of the seismographic branch of the National Observatory have just finished a report on the quakes and their causes. They declare that Guadalajara, with its 150,000 inhabitants, is built in the crater of a giant volcano which was active about 1,500 years ago. Below the city, they add, is the center of this crater, in which a new crater has formed, likely to break out at any time.

They warn the residents of Guadalajara that beneath them is an enormous caldron of molten stone and burning coal and sulphur combined with gases which come from still further down in the bowels of the earth. The report urges that the city be moved, or that at least the inhabitants abandon it immediately. The center of the crater is located a trifle west of the main plaza and practically under the state palace or capitol of the state of Jalisco.

Scientific measurements, soundings with a diamond drill and experiments with the gases which have been pouring through cracks in the earth in the city are given, with detailed results of the study. Professor Leon and his associates deduce that as surely as science can forecast the city will be destroyed by this buried crater, which they say is enormous, though they admit that they cannot with accuracy foretell when the volcano will burst forth.

They infer that the destruction will come within a year, for they say that the volcano, whose caldron is placed 200 feet below the surface of the earth, is what is known as ripe for the explosion. The report goes on to say that this is the first instance in the history of the world in which a city has been located over the crater of a volcano and that the heat from the buried bowl of fire accounts for the warm climate of Guadalajara, which, while 5,000 feet above the sea, has the temperature all the year round of a coastal resort, with practically no change between summer and winter.

Increasing heat noticed in this part of Jalisco for the past year and recorded by the local branch of the government weather bureau first gave Professor Leon the idea that subterranean fires were responsible for the climate. Then came the earthquakes, the opening of fissures in the main streets of the capital of the state, and the escape of large volumes of sulphur laden gases from these fissures.

Fuller publicity is being given to the report here, and government officials are seriously considering the removal of the capital to Juanaentlan on the San Antonio river.

The removal will follow the sinking away of all the government papers, which have been transferred to Mexico City already. The state palace or capitol in Guadalajara is one of the largest and most beautiful of all the buildings of its kind in Mexico and cost approximately 7,000,000 pesos. It fronts on the main plaza or public square and occupies one entire end, being nearly 1,000 yards in length.

Guadalajara is the second city in the republic, ranking next to Mexico City in population and above it in wealth, being second only to Merida, Yucatan, in this respect. It is the market place of two of the richest states in Mexico, Jalisco and Michoacan, and is commonly called "The Pearl of the Occident," while the surrounding territory is known as the granary of Mexico.

For these reasons the people who live here are loath to leave the city. The Catholic church will be especially hard hit if the removal idea is carried out. The cathedral, which is one of the finest in Mexico, contains more gold and silver ornaments than any other church save the cathedral of Puebla, and has in addition the distinction of having been completed in 1518 and of having been almost destroyed by an earthquake in 1750. It was severely shaken in 1818, and cracked in three places by the first series of the 340 quakes of the past three months. In June, 1912, the towers are 200 feet high. Byzantine in construction and the structure occupies one of the most valuable pieces of land in Guadalajara.

The most precious art possession of the entire republic is contained in the sacristy of the cathedral. It is Murillo's painting of the "Assumption of the Virgin," and it hangs directly above the entrance. In point of color and freshness this painting is better than any Murillo now known to the art world of Europe or America, while the work is one of the best examples of the famous master.

The beauty of this canvas has attracted thousands, and not a few offers have been made to purchase it, one of $250,000 coming from a New York financier. Seven times thieves have attempted to cut it from its frame, but each time they were followed by the vigilance of the priests. Four of the would-be robbers were captured and are now serving terms or have died in the prisons of Jalisco.

In June, 1915, when the cathedral was nearly destroyed, the section of wall on which this painting is fastened stood through all the quake. In June, 1912, when a crack more than a foot wide was opened in the top of the wall above this painting the crack ran downward almost to the end of the masonry frame and then divided into two cracks or fissures, encircling the canvas, but never touching it. The Indians believe, and the priests add in this belief, that nothing can harm "la santissima Virgen de Guadalajara," and so far the terrible tremblers have failed to injure it in the least.

The canvas was given to the Guadalupe diocese by the king of Spain shortly after the Peninsular war as a mark of gratitude for the sums of money turned over to the crown by this branch of the church in Mexico and it was hidden ten years in a niche in the cathedral to keep it from the French at the time of the occupation of Mexico.

"The top of the bowl of the crater beneath Guadalajara," said Professor Garcia while here, "is approximately 1,500 feet in diameter, but the actual bowl is much wider. I should say it is a quarter of a mile in width, and how deep no man can say."

"The composition of the escaping gases indicates that they are coming from burning coal and sulphur in a molten state, precisely the combination which causes the eruptions of Mount Colima, the only active volcano on the North American continent, about 90 miles due south of Guadalajara. Undoubtedly Colima, which blows off in a regular eruption about the middle of every September, is connected in some unknown manner with the hot springs, miniature geysers and many dead volcanoes which cover the territory reaching from the southern end of the Sierra Navarita, about 60 miles north of Guadalajara, to the sea at Manzanillo."

"I would not care to prophesy, but I believe that the annual fall eruption of Colima will see some sort of disturbance here, though it may be only heavy earthquakes and not the breaking out of the volcano. We ran diamond drills so deep into the earth in the center of Guadalajara that they came back almost red hot, no matter how slowly we operated them. We lowered the thermometers into the holes made by these drills and they recorded heat beyond the melting point of lead."

"We analyzed the gases coming from the fissures in various parts of the city and we found that they were not surface gases, coming from pockets in the earth and released by the earthquake, but that they exhibited all the characteristics of gases which have been taken from the vents of Colima and Popocatepetl volcanoes."

"Lastly we traced the scores of earthquake shocks which were felt here during the ten days of our stay and we found that every one was volcanic in its origin and not caused by the slipping of faults in the earth, as are some of the coastal quakes of this country and the United States. All were trepidatory, that is to say, up and down quakes, usually local in character and not oscillatory, as are most earthquakes which extend over a large section of the world's surface."

"This was our first hint that the quakes were volcanic—the confined area over which the tremors were felt. Then the seismograph, which was brought here from Mexico City and set up, indicated with its needle finger that the source of the shocks were almost beneath the city."

"We knew the quakes were volcanic and confinued to an area not more than 100 miles in diameter. Neither Colima nor any other volcano in Mexico was in eruption. We had to look closer to Guadalajara for the cause. We made a trip through the surrounding country and discovered that the city lies in the center of what was once a volcano.

"The walls of this ancient crater are fully 15 miles on all sides from the city. From the character of the stone composing these walls, their evidences of fire and the condition of the lava fragments which litter the bowl of the crater, I should say it was last active from 1,500 to 2,000 years ago."

"The mountain range which surrounds the city on all sides is the wall of this ancient crater. On the north and east, you know, the plateau of Mexico slopes downward to these ranges, on the west and south the ancient volcano wall slopes away 5,000 feet downward through some 70 or 80 miles to the Pacific ocean. This was an ideal location for a volcano, and precisely similar to the location of Colima, still active, and Orizaba, which, while still smoking, has not been active for 400 years."

"Now, in the center of this ancient crater, which must have been larger than any volcano of which we have knowledge at the present day, was the blow hole, or vent. Over this blow hole the Spaniards who conquered Mexico set up the city of Guadalajara, little thinking that they were selecting a veritable death trap for their settlement. Slowly through the eighteen or twenty centuries since it was last active this central melting pot of the old volcano has been forming a new and equally powerful mass of molten material, which sooner or later will blow Guadalajara off the face of the earth."

"An earthquake, landslides, cloudbursts or other elemental disturbances filled the opening of this ancient crater with a cap 300 feet in thickness. This cap, much thicker than that which any other volcano has had to blow off, is the only thing that has saved Guadalajara from destruction years ago. How long it will protect the city now is a question no man can answer and prove the answer, it may be years; to my mind it is a matter of months; in any event, I believe that the only way to save the capital is to move it bodily and move it while there is time to do so."

Aside from its scientific interest, and from the unique situation of a city built on a volcano, there remains the very practical problem which confronts Guadalajara—the job of moving a city of 150,000 souls to a new location. So far, Juanaentlan is the most likely candidate for the honor of being the capital of Jalisco, but there are a number of other towns out of range of the buried crater, all of which will be considered before the change is made.

All sorts of wild propositions to tap the crater and draw off the menacing fires have been made to the authorities of Guadalajara, but the men of science say there is no way to curb the demon of fire enged by nature below and that the city must be removed or it will be destroyed. One man proposed to turn the waters of the Santiago river into a huge tunnel, driven to the heart of the crater, but the earthquake specialists quickly informed the city officials that this merely would cause an immediate and more terrible explosion than if the crater were left to itself.

Another man offered to tunnel into the crater from a point five miles outside the city, and on the slightly lower or western side, and let the contents of the crater flow out. He was disappointed when informed that his tunnel would have to be about 500 feet in diameter and that the heat would be so great a hundred feet from the inner end of the tunnel that human beings could not endure it.

Thus it appears that unless a "surgeon for earthquakes" appears, and that very shortly, Guadalajara will have to pick up her houses and move to a new location. The result to real estate owners and men who have bought or built some of the fine blocks which mark the main streets of the Jalisco capital will be financial ruin.

Some of these men profess to doubt the word of the scientists and to believe that the city is safe. They will throw their influence and their votes against moving the city unless they can be convinced that there is a very real personal danger for themselves and their families.

PROPER ATTENTION TO BREEDING EWE DURING AUTUMN SEASON IS DESIRABLE

Extra Labor and Care at This Time Will be Repaid Many Times Over at Lambing Time—Rape Makes One of Most Excellent Feeds for Flock.

(By ELMER HENDERSON.)

A flock of ewes just weaning lambs and in thin flesh at the time of conception are apt to be very poor subjects for maternity in the spring. No matter how well the ewe may be fed just previous to the time of lambing, she will not be in her best condition to nourish her offspring unless she is in fair condition at the time of mating.

The reason is at once apparent. If a ewe is thin when she is bred the burden of growing the young is too much of a strain upon her to allow of her gaining much flesh. This brings us to what is known as "flushing" among old shepherds.

Flushing may be defined as putting the ewe upon highly succulent and nutritious feeds just previous to mating.

I have said before that it was necessary to have the ewe in good flesh at the mating season. This is just the object of flushing.

It has been found by all practical shepherds that a pint of grain in September is worth a quart at lambing time. The reason is that the ewe fed grain in the fall has very little harder to bear in the shape of the growing young, while in the case of the ewe heavy with lamb all the food eaten goes mostly to nourish the fetus. It will be inferred that if grain will make the difference in the new vigor which puts her in much the same condition that she is in the advent of cool weather.

Whether this is the reason or not does not matter to the farmer if he knows whether this or some other reason applies, he gets the results looked for, which is of vastly more importance.

Often times the means nearest at hand are the best and this is true in our particular case. The meadow is always at hand and could easily be used for fall feed for the ewes. The aftermath that springs up in the fall makes good growth and furnishes a very nutritious and highly palatable food. If there is some clover in it so much the better, as there is no food better for sheep.

Rape makes a very excellent food and I am very partial to it. A small patch of rape sown in the summer, by this time is large enough to make a lot of good feed. Another way is to sow rape in the corn at the last cultivation and turn the sheep in the corn. If a few sheep are turned into a lot of rape and corn they may be allowed to run there for some time before they will in any way damage the corn.

Then, too, this furnishes fine feed for the lambs after the ewes are taken out. They may be allowed to run here all fall and will live on the rape and lower blades of corn, and if the condition of the ewe, grass will do the same thing—and this is just what happens. The ewe that has plenty of good nutritious grasses in the fall is almost sure to come to lambing time in good heart and raise a good, lusty lamb, while the reverse is true of the ewe that is not given a good chance.

Flushing is especially desirable in large flocks where it is desirable to have the ewes all lamb at nearly the same time.

With many flockmasters it is considered desirable to have the ewes bred as early as possible so as to have the lambs ready for the early and therefore best market.

It has been found that by flushing the ewes they may be made to breed earlier than they would otherwise, and most of them will lamb in a comparatively short period.

It is well known that ewes come in heat with the coming of cool weather, and it is probably true that the fresh, palatable grass, by cooling the system and invigorating the ewe by a fresh flow of blood, infuses into her corn is not down too much they will not bother the ewe.

Where it is intended to make rape and corn serve this double purpose of pasturing the ewes and the weaned lambs it is well to plant a lot of pumpkins for feed for the lambs later in the fall. They will do their own gathering and they are the best possible vermifuges.

However well your fall pasture is it is always well to remember that a little grain will not come amiss, and I believe it would pay every sheep owner to feed a half pound of oats to his sheep every day during the fall and winter, even though they are on luxuriant pasture.

There are many other ways of caring for the ewes that the ones mentioned. The only point of great importance is to give good, green food and lots of it. What the kind of food will be, every farmer can best decide for himself, but this much is certain: All extra labor with the ewe flock at mating season will be repaid many times over at the lambing period.

PREVENTING DISEASE IS MOST DESIRED

Many Farmers Realize That When Hogs Are Taken Sick the Case Demands Quick Action.

It is of the greatest importance in the care of the swine that the owner should always have in view the prevention of disease rather than the cure. Hogs are subject to but few diseases, and these are malignant, epidemic or contagious of the most serious type. It is very difficult to give medicine to a sick hog, and this, combined with the rapid course of the disease which affects them, makes the treatment of disease very unsatisfactory in severe cases of hog cholera, pneumonia, etc.

The average stockman calls every disease hog cholera which affects his hogs. A well-known professor of Cornell gives fifteen different diseases that are generally called hog cholera. Many of these diseases are very serious, and run their course so rapidly that sometimes a few days' neglect causes the loss of nearly an entire herd of hogs. This explains why one farmer will take a remedy and cure his hogs, when perhaps his nearby neighbor will take it and not obtain such good results. In nine cases out of ten it will depend on whether the farmer is careful and systematic in following the directions not alone in giving the treatment, but also in using disinfectants and the general care.

Many farmers realize that when hogs are taken sick the case demands immediate attention if they expect to save any of their hogs. Some farmers are very careless and wait till the disease is well started, and even then do not pretend to follow directions. It is surprising that these careless farmers save any of their hogs after disease starts.

All these facts simply go to prove that the sensible way is to handle your hogs in such a way as to prevent disease. Build up and improve the constitutional strength. This is what will save you great loss from hog cholera. When your hogs are sick with the worst kind of hog cholera we do not believe anything will help them, and the safer way in such cases is to take an ax and kill them at once, and then burn the remains. This is for the malignant form of hog cholera. In a majority of cases they do not have this very fatal form, and they can be cured with the proper treatment.

Beta Strawberries Late.

I have had good success setting strawberry plants in the fall if they are set late enough and some miserably failures from setting them in August or the early part of September. I think if the plants are left growing until their crowns are well formed and then set out as late as November 1, I have gained something, says a writer in an exchange. Unless I had time to set them very early in the spring I would trust to late fall setting.

SAW NO CAUSE FOR WORRY

Small Boy Pretty Well Satisfied That the Future Was Not Likely to Be a Hard One.

The Cleveland Plain Dealer says:

A Lakewood woman was recently reading to her little boy the story of a young lad whose father was taken ill and died, after which he set himself diligently to work to support himself and mother. When she had finished the story she said:

"Dear Billy, if your papa were to die would you work to support your dear mamma?"

"Naw!" said Billy, unexpectedly.

"But why not?"

"Ain't we got a good house to live in?"

"Yes, dearie—but we can't eat the house, you know."

"Ain't there a lot o' stuff in the pantry?"

"Yes, but that won't last forever."

"I'll last till you git another husband, won't it? You're a pretty good looker, ma!"

Mamma gave up right there.

Absorbed.

A college professor noted for his concentration of thought, returned home from a scientific meeting one night still pondering deeply upon the subject that had been discussed. As he entered his room he heard a noise that seemed to come from under the bed.

"Is there someone there?" he asked absently.

"No, professor," answered the intruder, who knew his peculiarities.

"That's strange," muttered the professor. "I was almost sure I heard someone under the bed."

A While for a Time.

A Cleveland school teacher writes that she asked her class what was the difference between the expressions, "a while," and "a time," says the Cleveland Plain Dealer. Nobody seemed to have any idea on the subject. Finally the light of intelligence was seen to shine in the eyes of one little boy, and the teacher called upon him to save the intellectual honor of the class.

"I know, teacher!" he cried eagerly. "When papa says he's going out for a while, mamma says she knows he's going out for a time!"

That's one way of looking at it.

Call to Arms.

"Bang!" went the rifles at the maneuvers.

"Oo-oo," screamed the pretty girl—a nice, decorous, surprised little scream. She stepped backward into the surprised arms of a young man.

"Oh," said she, blushing, "I was frightened by the rifles. I beg your pardon."

"Not at all," said the young man. "Let's go over and watch the artillery."

Reason Was Plain.

"My husband has deserted me and I want a warrant," announced the large lady.

"What reason did he give for deserting you?" asked the prosecutor.

"I don't want any lip from you. I want a warrant. I don't know what reason he had."

"I think I understand his reason," said the official feebly, as he proceeded to draw up a warrant.

A Confirmed Coffee Drinker Takes to Postum.

A housewife was recently surprised when cook served Postum instead of coffee. She says:

"For the last five or six years I have been troubled with nervousness, indigestion and heart trouble. I couldn't get any benefit from the doctor's medicine so finally he ordered me to stop drinking coffee, which I did."

"I drank hot water while taking the doctor's medicine, with some improvement, then went back to coffee with the same old trouble as before."

A new servant girl told me about Postum—she her folks used it and liked it in place of coffee. We got a package but I told her I did not believe my husband would like it, as he was a great coffee drinker."

"To my surprise he called for a third cup, and it was 'good stuff' and wanted to know what it was. We have used Postum ever since and both feel better than we have in years."

"My husband used to have bad spells with his stomach and would be sick three or four days, during which time he could not eat or drink anything. But since he gave up coffee and took to Postum, he has had no more trouble, and we were fully before it was all caused by coffee."

"I have not had any return of my former troubles since drinking Postum, and feel better and can do more work than in the last ten years. We tell everyone about it—some say they tried it and did not like it. I tell them 'I make all the difference as to how it's made. It should be made according to directions—then it is delicious.'"

Vending Devices in Germany

Automatic devices of every description have been planned small tradesmen and little shops to a great extent in Germany. Germany might almost be called the "land of the automat." Furthermore, these devices are popular. At all postoffices, stamps and post cards are sold by automatic machines; at the railway stations, platform tickets and suburban tickets are sold by automatics; automat restaurants, where one can secure a glass of beer, wine, or liquor, a sandwich, square meal, cup of coffee, chocolate, etc., by dropping a coin in the slot, abound everywhere. Every city of 15,000 or 20,000 population and over has from one to several hundred such restaurants. At railway stations automats sell chocolate, candy, picture post cards, and even a little bit of "frat" to the injured, containing a box of pain killer, bandages, needle, thread, etc. Ten pfennigs in a slot opens the doors of toilet compartments, delivering a towel or piece of soap. A coin in a slot obtains a cigar, a tune from a mechanical music box, a pair of shoestrings, a collar button, a visiting card, name plate for suitcase, tells one's fortune or weight, etc.

I could never draw the line between meanness and dishonesty. What is mean always grades into dishonesty. A MacDoald

FOR APPELLATE JUDGE,
JUDGE A. J. KIRK.

If a thing is made at home, home labor is employed.

The Democratic party always goes into partnership with calamity.

Remember if you vote wrong you harm yourself more than any one else.

The business of the country rests on a protective tariff basis.—President Taft.

When they formed the harvester trust, evidently they let George do it.—Washington Post.

A party formed to further one man's ambition cannot survive that man's defeat.—Baltimore American.

It will cost $38,300,000 to run the New York schools next year, according to the budget prepared by the Board of Education. This is an increase of $5,400,000 over 1912.

Judge O'Rear received only $1,000 to run the Roosevelt preliminary campaign in Kentucky. When there are 70,000 purchasable votes in the State, according to the Judge's own statement, $1,000 makes him look like a piker.—Cynthiana Democrat.

DECLARES TAFT MAY WIN.

Last Friday, the twenty-seven Roosevelt men who were named as presidential electors on the Republican ticket in Pennsylvania withdrew and Taft men were named. Following this the Republican National Committee announced that all disputes excepting that in California had been settled satisfactorily. That means the Roosevelt and Taft wings of the Republican party are beginning to flap together. It is safe to say that before November 5th, the Republican party will be practically reunited. This should be a warning to Democrats everywhere to get on their stride and stay there until after the polls close.—Cynthiana Democrat.

Tips From Texas

As a general thing, when a man is impatient to get home he is hungry.

When two discover that they can't live as cheaply as one they usually begin having things charged at the store.

It is all right for procrastination to be the thief of time, but if it were to steal a dollar from us we would want it indicted.

If the statistics were available probably it would be found that 97 per cent of those who want this country to go to war with Mexico don't want to go themselves.—Dallas News.

The Wall Street Journal takes the cheerful view that "one cause of the high cost of living is that so many people have the price."

Why not blame Thomas A. Edison for the high cost of living. He's in the invention business and ought to know a way out of it.

The Progressives know what they want. That is the beauty of their platform.—Louisville Herald.

What they want is an office.

English automobile manufacturers admit that American cheap machines are the most popular and that American wages in the automobile industry are twice as large as English wages. The Protective system can always afford to be judged by results.

THE G. O. P. AND THE OLD SOLDIER.

The Republican party has always been partial to the old boys in blue.

The great pension rolls of our government proves it if nothing more. But that is not all. The old party has given members of this brave and gallant band positions of trust and honor throughout the past fifty years.

The time is coming when we cannot honor many more of them. But this year when the government and the constitution is again fraught with danger, what more proper than to see one of the old boys leading the army in Ohio.

Democrats have no use for you, they have turned to a youngster from Dayton; the progressives have picked a millionaire, but the old party felt that one of the old boys in blue is what they wanted, and the battle scarred veteran that your organization has honored in the past, was picked by them for this position of trust and honor and responsibility.

He is looking to you for support. He stands in the front bent under the load of time and the privations of those days that you all remember and is looking for his comrades. Will you be there? Will you shirk your position now? Or will his dimmed eyes be filled with tears as he sees you old boys turning out ready to stand by him. He will look for the old boys on election day November 5th. Be there and show him that the old fire is still coursing in your veins, that the old bugle call still calls to you, that you can still assist in the struggle whenever the government and the constitution calls for you.

When the Republican party honored him it honored you. They felt that your numbers are dwindling year by year. After a few more years there will be none of you left to be honored. Then it will be said of the last of you:

"On fame's eternal camping ground
Their silent tents are spread,
And glory guards with solemn round
The bivouac of the dead."

Those now remaining to meet one another bend more and more to the weight of years. You greet one another with the touch of weakening and trembling hands. Your eyes search your fellows' features with dimness and uncertainty. Your voices break. Your steps make uncertain response to the demand of life and drum. You are passing. Soon there will be none of you to answer the call of the roll. You did your duty nobly that our Union should be maintained. It is well and proper that great parties should bow to honor you, and now turn out and show in your declining years that you are still with that party that has in the past felt itself honored in honoring you and having your support.—Record Republican.

High Cost

Too Many Engaged in Selling Farm Truck

By H. H. GROSS, President National Soil Fertility League

IN THESE days this is one of the chief topics of conversation. All sorts of reasons are assigned for it. In the writer's opinion it is largely due to modern day extravagance. Most of us are living beyond our means, buying things we cannot afford. Thousands are borrowing money to buy automobiles. The middle classes today are living better than many kings and nobles lived three hundred years ago. Is it after all the high cost of living, or the cost of living high?

As a people we do not know what economy means. The plain, simple fare of our grandfathers that gave sturdy men and strong women is supplemented with fare that is over-rich, too highly seasoned and an unnecessary variety. Thousands are buying porterhouse steaks on a soup-bone income. A little study of household economies will disclose to the housewife how she may use the cheaper cuts of meat and prepare wholesome, palatable food. In most households the garbage can is the most expensive boarder. It is everyone's duty to economize and we ought to be proud of our success along this line instead of indulging in wasteful extravagances and calling people's attention to the fact.

The whole system of marketing is cumbersome, unscientific, and makes for extravagance and waste. There are too many persons employed between the producer on the farm and the consumer's table. Co-operative buying will help reduce the cost. We have three markets where there should be one. The housewife who will visit the market and make her selections will save a large percentage over the woman who sits at home and orders by telephone.

We must have a larger production of food and cheaper means of distribution and some old-fashioned economy or suffer the consequences.

Many Women Writers Adopt Masculine Names

By Katherine Driscoll, New York

Women writers have not chosen masculine pen names because they wished to appear masculine or to ape men in any way. They chose them simply as a matter of protection from a business standpoint. They knew, just as every woman who has lived long enough knows, that it is in the very nature of men to belittle a woman's work in every possible way and at every possible opportunity.

Many women today in the business world use their initials only in dealing with men, providing there is a separating distance between them and the men with whom they deal. They know that a man would not dare give to one of his own sex the raw deal he would give to a woman and so the woman gets on the defensive and poses as a man for business protection and that only.

It's scoundrelly that this is so, but it's true, nevertheless. Men regulate wages, and women all along the line have to take "pot luck" even though they do the work better and are more reliable than the men at their elbows. In the schoolroom, shop, factory and office a woman's work is depreciated just because she is a woman.

And our great women writers posed before the world as men that they might get the recognition a man gets for work well done. We have had George Eliot and George Sand, two of the greatest writers of the age. Even Onida chose a name that was obscure. Charles Egbert Craddock, Gail Hamilton, Saxé Holmes and others of our own time chose masculine names for a good and worthy purpose.

Even when possible women writers have kept their identity from their publishers for fear of a "throw down" because of sex. The Bronte sisters were known to their publishers as the Messrs. Bell. It is the hardest thing in the world for the average man to concede to a woman a just recognition of her ability. And back of it all is a base, unworthy selfishness.

People Should Marry When Getting Old

By M. Bernhardt, Waukesha, Wis.

It seems to me that if there is ever a time in the life of any individual when he or she wants a home and a fireside of his own and really needs the companionship of one of similar age and tastes, and one whose interests are identical, it is when the decline of life has been reached.

People past middle life do not marry for the same reason that younger people do. Their regard is based on mutual respect and esteem and a desire for congenial companionship, and, why, if there may be joy in the morning of life, may there not be peace at eventide?

I have known several instances where people past middle age have married and in every instance they have lived quiet, contented lives, each happy in the companionship and sympathy of the other.

There are thousands of people past middle life who would marry were it not for facing the ridicule of those who claim to be their friends.

"Why should people be doomed to a lonely, joyless life just because they are no longer young?"

Why should not a woman of 55 and a man of 60, or a woman of 60 and a man of 70 or 75 for that matter, live their own lives, in their own way, have a home of their own and be independent, where they can sleep when they choose, get up when they like and eat what and when they please and not be obliged to conform to the rules and regulations of other people's households?

EXTENSION OF
The Forced-to-Sell Sale
For Thirty Days, From Oct. 20 to Nov. 20
This is the greatest FORCED-TO-SELL SALE ever known in the history of business in Marysville. The entire stock of the Star Clothing House will go in this great FORCED-TO-SELL SALE. And all for less than ACTUAL COST OF RAW MATERIAL. Owing to the extreme warm weather during the first of our sale, the farmers having been so busy that they did not get a chance to purchase their FALL CLOTHING, SHOES AND FURNISHING GOODS, therefore we have had hundreds of people to request us to extend our great FORCED-TO-SELL SALE a while longer so that it would give them a chance to make their Fall purchases at our great FORCED-TO-SELL SALE which is now going on at Pecor's old stand, No. 24 West Second street.

GOOD TIMES OR HARD TIMES?

Take Your Choice Between Protection Prosperity or Tariff-
For-Revenue Only Depression

Chicago Inter-Ocean.
In a telegram to the Commercial Travelers' Sound Money League, now meeting in New York, President Taft says:

I ask the business men of this country what encouragement they will find and what new investments they will feel like making if they arise from their beds on the 6th day of November next and learn that the Democratic party, will after the 4th of March, 1913, be in absolute control of the executive, the Senate and the House of Representatives?

The Tariff would then be revised on Democratic principles as shown by the Democratic hills of the last two sessions of the Congress, and our whole economic system changed.
Prosperity would be halted, business would be impaired and the demand for labor would show a marked falling off.

That states the issue squarely. The business men can have either a Protective Tariff, modeled on Republican principles, or be can have approximately a revenue Tariff, fashioned according to Democratic ideas. There is no other choice. And let no business man de-lude himself with the idea that there is.

The choice is now between a Protective and a vaguely less Protective Tariff such as Roosevelt promises to enact if he is elected, irrespective of the political complexion of the House and Senate. Roosevelt can not hope to be elected.

The choice is now between the Roosevelt compromise, with both a revenue tariff and a Protective Tariff, and a Democratic Tariff made as nearly as possible on the revenue only basis. Roosevelt may give us a Democraft Tariff, but he cannot give us the curious hybrid that he advocates himself.

The choice, we repeat, is between the Protective principal, with the prosperity it has rightly come to stand for, and the Tariff-for-revenue principles, with the disturbance of business which is as sure to follow the attempt to apply it by national legislation as one day's sun is to follow another.
If the business men want a revenue Tariff which means an abandonment of the Protective principal itself, well and good. Let him vote for Wilson or Roosevelt. If he wants a Protective Tariff there is but one way to help keep it. That is to vote for William H.
Taft for President.

until the last few years was supposed to be incur-

"TO KENTUCKY."

"Not the oldest nor yet the youngest; not the richest nor yet the poorest; not the largest nor yet the least; but take it all in all,
for men and women, for fields and herds, for fields and skies, for happy homes and loving hearts, the best place outside of heaven, the good Lord ever made."

Kentuckians generally will learn with delight that the Rev. Dr. Hugh McLellan of San Antonio, Tex., who delivered the convention sermon at the beginning of the great international meeting of the Disciples of Christ now in progress in Louisville, is the same Dr. Mc-Lellan, who while Pastor of the First Christian Church at Richmond, wrote the famous toast,
"To Kentucky" which won the prize offered by The Louisville Times in a contest for the best sentiment of the kind, four or five years ago.

The annual report of the Secretary showed that the number of Churches contributing to the work of the Board during 1912 was 2,971, a loss of 617-two from the previous year.

The number of contributing Sunday-schools was 3,981, an increase 194 over 1911. The number of Christian Endeavor Societies contributing was 529, a loss of 110 and the number of individuals contributing to the work was 1,439, an increase of 237.

The total contributions were $400,728.44, an increase of $21,646.11 over the foregoing year. There was a gain of $11,469.29 in regular receipts and loss of $15,590.97 in annuities and a loss of $4,230.91 in bequests.

The report included personal letters from missionaries at different stations in the foreign field and surveys of the work accomplished and to be accomplished.

"The Million Dollar Movement" for foreign missions, considered by many of the Disciples to be the greatest of the many great projects in which they are engaged was then taken up for discussion.

The Rev. H. T. Cree of Augusta, Ga., is Pastor of the only endowed Church among the Disciples. Mr. Cree has made a great record there. He is a native Kentuckian, and believes that he has not been as near heaven for some years as during the present convention.

Then the Rev. J. Boyd Jones of Anderson,
Ind., is Pastor of one of the largest Churches in the state. He is one of the men who claim that his Church of 2,000 members would be much stronger if reduced to 500, and recently began a campaign to strengthen his Church by a system of benevolent subtraction.

Two thousand attended yesterday's meetings.

ODD WINTER COAT

A civet fur coat brought into use by the continued high price of fur and skins, and will continue to be popular wear this winter. It is trimmed with a fox collar and cuffs and is of a brown shade. A brown soft velour hat, a La Vallée, will complete the costume.

FAD FOR MASCOT JEWELRY

One of the Prettiest Novelties That Has Been Put Forward for Many Seasons.

She who has money to afford novelties should go in for mascot jewelry. Never has it been more fascinating. Even if you are not superstitious, you are not above a luck charm of some sort.

A safety pin brooch, with a stone in the center, has attached to it by a thin short chain, a lucky tortoise in gold or enamel. The mascot can be further enhanced by using one's birth stone.

A motor bracelet of gold or silver wire can have attached to it various lucky charms, as the lucky finger in ivory, a lucky penny, a tiny rabbit's foot, and horseshoe, and a minute blue bird for happiness as well as safety. Sometimes these lucky pieces are worn around the neck on a fine fold chain, or they form an interesting pendant for the watch fob.

Great favorites are the lucky pig and lucky bear charms, while a novelty for the cat lover is a small bowl of gold chain, or they form an interesting flash in it and a watch cat at one side.

A fascinating love charm which comes in circular or heart-shaped has on it a plus and minus sign with Anjournal above the former and Quier below it, while beneath the minus sign is Que Demain, which translated means that the donor's love shall daily be "more than yesterday and less than tomorrow."

The fond father now presents mother with a ring containing the birth stone of each child.

SMART DRESS

This very graceful dress is in pale gray satin. The skirt is plain and has a short tunic of nylon finished with a narrow silk trimming. The bodice, of satin, is cut Magyar, with short sleeves, the long sleeves being joined on with wrapped seams; the low round yoke is of lace. The fabric is of nylon edged with fringe, it has long ends falling over front of skirt; these are also finished with fringe. Hat of dark gray, Tassel, swathed

TRAGEDY OF A WIND

By GEORGE I. PALMER.

"Look, Margaret!" said the girl in the toque, sitting up suddenly and staring intently at the crowded waiting room. "Look at that man—the one just getting into the elevator! It's too late. He's gone."

She sank back into her seat. "If he hadn't got away so quickly I should have rushed up to him and asked him to please pull my hair," she remarked pensively.

Her companion looked exasperated. "Helen, you do say the most ridiculous things! Will you kindly tell me why you should want to rush up to any man and ask him to pull your hair?"

The girl in the toque giggled. "Why, yes, I was just going to tell you," she replied.

"You know two years ago last summer, after I had typhoid and had to have my hair cut off, I went up to a farm in Wisconsin to stay a month."

"I know you stayed only a week," "That's part of my story. One day when I had been up there nearly a week I started out for a long walk in the woods, in the course of my wanderings I came to a lovely little lake with the most beautiful pond lilies floating on it. There was a canoe drawn up on the bank at one end and a little boat house among the trees."

"When does the man come in?"

"All in good time, my dear. I'm leading up to him. I looked all around for somebody the canoe might belong to, and then I decided to borrow it for a few minutes and paddle over and get some lilies, trusting to luck that the owner would be kind enough to stay away until I got back."

"Nice, high principled thing to do," "I paddled over to the lilies and was having a beautiful time gathering a great bunch of them, when I discovered that the paddle was floating around in the water just out of reach. I leaned over as far as I dared, and was clawing for it, when I heard a shout from the shore. A man was gesticulating and gyrating on the beach. 'Hey, look out!' he yelled. 'Wait till I row out and get it!'

"He dashed into the boat house and brought out a rowboat. He rowed over and pushed the paddle within my reach, and I paddled back with him in my wake, feeling the way I used to when I tried to play hockey and got caught."

"And what has all this got to do with hair pulling?" asked the other young woman restlessly.

"Oh, I'm coming to that. After he had helped me out of his canoe and dragged the lilies out, we looked at each other and laughed. He had the most delightful laugh and dark blue eyes and broad shoulders. And then he wanted to know if he couldn't carry the lilies home for me, and the first thing I knew we were wandering along through the woods and having a beautiful time."

"You didn't think of asking his name or where he came from before you went strolling through the country with him, I suppose?" suggested the girl who was doing the listening.

"Well, everything went along delightfully," proceeded the girl with the toque, "until just as we reached the farm house where I was staying. Then a nasty little gust of wind came up—there hadn't been a breath of air stirring all day—and blew my hat off. And, my dear, it took my wig with it! You know I had to wear one because I didn't have any hair, and there I stood looking like a sheared sheep."

"He certainly must have known how it was."

"I don't know what he knew or what he thought, for the minute he brought my hat back I flew into the house and the next day I skipped the country and came back home. I was afraid I would see him again. Now you know why I want to have him pull my hair."

"Oh, Margaret, here he comes back again, right toward—look, the tall one with the gray overcoat!"

"That man! Why, that's Sidney Hollister. I've known him for ages." Before the girl in the toque could stop her the other young woman had intercepted the young man and he was standing smiling down at him.

"Sidney, this is Helen Benedict, and she wants you to pull her hair, please," gurgled Margaret.

"Pull her hair—?" the youth began amazedly, then a light dawned in his eyes as he held out his hand eagerly.

"Is it really you? Well, I thank you ought to have your hair pulled for the way you treated me that day, and then skipped the country afterward without leaving a trace. I tried to bribe the people at the farm house—'I'll break off and then begin again. 'I won't pull it here in public, but if you'll let Margaret bring me up to see you some day I'll be glad to give it a little tweak and call it square.' 'Didn't you really think—'

"That you always were a wig? Not for a minute—and anyway," audaciously, "you weren't such an awful eyesore without it!"

"Easily Fitted."

Colonel Jasper, having a new pair of shoes that hurt his corns, decided to give them away to one of the negro hangers at the hotel livery stable, and picked out Zeke as a likely object of his generosity when he saw the old fellow shuffling toward him wearing a pair of tattered shoes that looked like sandals.

"Zeke, what size shoes do you wear?" he called to him. The old negro stopped short in expectation.

"Any size, cunnell!" he exclaimed earnestly. "Any size!"—Judge.

His Real Weed. "Say, old man, don't get disheartened just because your first investment went wrong; the market is full of good things, and if you will come down to the office I'll give you a pointer."

DID IT ON IMPULSE

By GEORGE H. ROSE.

Garble always has been a creature of impulse. To this he attributes most of his successes and all of his troubles. Whether the troubles overbalanced the successes or not is a delicate subject.

One of his wild impulses swept over Garble's soul as he turned to gaze into the face of an excited bellboy. The bellboy had dashed madly through the hotel lobby and around the cashier's glass cage and then had grabbed Garble by the elbow as he stood counting out bills.

"Well, what's the matter?" asked Garble, as the boy stuttered with excitement.

Garble and Rockton had been stopping for a few days at a Chicago hotel. Now they were preparing to depart. They had dropped their bags over on the other side of the lobby as they came downstairs.

So the bellboy stuttered as he grabbed Garble's arm. "Say," he gasped, "them your bags over on the other side of the lobby? By the door?"

"They are," replied Garble. "Why?"

"Well," said the bellboy, "there's a man trying to steal 'em! You'd better come quick!"

It was then that Garble was obsessed by his sudden idea. He shut his mouth, which he had opened to explain the matter, and stuffed his change into his pocket with an exaggerated display of haste.

"Where is he?" he growled, as he ran after the fleeing bellboy.

Across the lobby he described Rockton talking away with the two suitcases, headed for the checkroom, where they were to have been left during the day.

Spurred on by authority, the boy seized Rockton.

"Here!" he cried. "Whachu doin' with them bags?"

Rockton turned a mildly surprised face upon his captor and then glanced smilingly at Garble in the rear. He wondered why Garble looked so sour.

"Why," he said easily, "one of 'em's mine, and the other is his," indicating Garble.

The boy turned upon Garble a look which spelled complete understanding.

"How about that for nerve?" he asked.

"He's an old hand at it," said Garble, stepping up and frowning upon Rockton. "Drop 'em! And we'll have to see about you!"

Garble pointed to his name card in the tag on his suitcase. "Clever of him," he commented to the bellboy.

"What do you mean to—?" began Rockton, indignantly.

Garble transfixed him with a stony stare. "I mean to hand you over to the police for grabbing my grips; that's what I mean," he said distinctly. Then he coughed. He had to, because Rockton's face was so funny. "Call the house detective!" commanded he.

Amazement, rage and the shock reduced Rockton to a state of incoherence, which was easily taken for a sign of guilt. Moreover, the house detective was feeling unusually suspicious that day. And Garble was impressive.

"You come with me," the detective told Rockton.

As Garble, with unholy glee, gazed upon his miserable friend, he thought of an added touch. They had been due to take luncheon with Miss Nedden and her mother at one o'clock and, if the truth must be told, there was quite a contest on between Rockton and Garble as to who should win the favor of pretty Alice Nedden.

"This man's liking for my grips has delayed me," he murmured. "I have an engagement at one o'clock and I don't believe I can make it unless I call a taxi—"

"Don't call one," suggested the house detective. "You'll have to come along to the station to prefer charges!"

It was then that Rockton, catching a glimpse of the consternation on Garble's face, braced up. He even grinned. They sat glaring at each other all the way to the station and then Rockton had his lanings.

"Look here," he said to the questioning officer at the desk. "He says he can describe all the articles in both grips! Well, so can I! Why isn't my word as good as his? I tell you, if you'll investigate this you'll find he's the guilty man! He's trying to steal my property by having me locked up."

"It's all a joke," protested Garble, watching the clock hands.

"I think I'll look into this," said the desk sergeant, ponderously.

Which he proceeded to do, with all the frills of red tape known to a conscientious city policeman.

With the combined and disgusted aid of the hotel clerk and two business friends, after they had related the history of their lives from birth and had been threatened with a fine for "getting gay," Garble and Rockton, at 5:30 o'clock that afternoon, finally were released.

Garble was a chastened man. He had been through much since noon. He had not even dared to telephone an explanation to Alice, since it would never do to mix her up in a police case. Besides, how could he explain to her that he was unable to appear at luncheon because he was detained by the police?

They caught their train for the east with only a second to spare. When his rancor had somewhat cooled Rockton approached Garble, who was writing voluminously.

"What are you doing?" he growled. Garble looked up coldly. "I am writing a telegram," he said distinctly, "to Miss Alice Nedden. And it's bare work!"

Proud of Record. A clergyman in Chicago, celebrating the fiftieth anniversary of his pastorate, draws attention to the record of happy marriages at which he has officiated. Out of 4,607 couples married, only two couples have been divorced.

Latest Horror. "Every morning," observed the doctor, "over my coffee, I see in the newspaper an account of some motor car accident." "Yes," said the professor, "that's the auto crash of your breakfast table."

SHE COULD ANSWER FOR HIM

Little Comfort for Candidate in Reason Assigned by Wife for Her Being Confident.

Mr. Williams, one of five candidates for the office of sheriff in one of the northern counties of Wisconsin, was making a house-to-house canvass of a rural district, soliciting votes. Coming to the house of Farmer Thompson, he was met at the door by the good housewife, and the following dialogue ensued:

"Is Mr. Thompson at home?"

"No; he has gone to town."

"I am very sorry, as I would have liked to talk to him."

"Is there anything I can tell him for you?"

"My name is Williams, candidate for sheriff, and I wanted to exact a promise from him to vote for me at the coming election."

"Oh, that will be all right. I know he will promise, for he has already promised four other candidates the same thing."—Norman E. Mack's National Monthly.

Harry—Well, you know, "revenge is sweet."

His Point of Vantage. The mayor of a small town was trying a negro for abusing his wife. She claimed he got drunk and tried to beat her, and she hit him.

The mayor turned to their little girl and asked:

"Girl, was your father under the influence of whiskey when your mother hit him?"

"No, sah. He was under the kitchen table," she very quickly replied.—Mack's National Monthly.

BOY'S FACE A MASS OF SCABBY SORES

Awful to Look At, Resinol Cured in Less Than Two Weeks.

St. Louis, Mo.—"At about 11 years of age my face was covered with a mass of scabby sores, awful to look at, and my sleep was broken up by the intense itching, and then after scratching, the sores would pain me just something awful. My mother got salves and soaps to use, but all to no purpose. A friend of mine who was Physical Director at the Y. M. C. A. at that time, told me there was a bad case, and would spread all over the body if something were not done. He gave me some Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment, and in less than two weeks I was cured, without leaving any marks or scars whatever." (Signed) Ernest Le Pique, Jr., 3021 Dickson.

Resinol Soap and Ointment stop itching instantly, and quickly heal eczema, rashes, ringworm and facial eruptions, as well as scabs, boils, skin burns, acids, wounds, and itching, inflamed and bleeding piles. Not New. First Neighbor—Have you heard tell of them new-fangled trial marriages?

Second Neighbor—I don't see nothing new about 'em. Mine's been a trial for me for the last twenty years!—Judge.

Good Time to Do It. "Is your daughter going to practice on the piano this afternoon?"

"Yes, I think so."

"Well, then, I'd like to borrow your lawn mower. I've got to cut the grass some time, anyway."—Judge.

Palliating News. "Oh, dear, officer, was my poor husband shot when you got him to the station?"

"No, madam; only half shot."

Serious One. "What was the last operation that famous surgeon performed?"

"He cut his wife out of his will."

Daddy's Whack-Whack. On the occasion of her last visit to a certain Baltimore household a young matron of that city found a little friend in tears.

"What's the matter with little Marie?" she asked, endeavoring to console the weeping child.

"Daddy has just given me whack-whack," the youngster replied between sobs.

"Thoughtless daddy!" exclaimed the young woman, repressing a smile. "And where did he whack-whack little Marie?"

"On the back of my tummy," was the answer.

Righteous Indignation. Little Ruth was the youngest daughter in a very strict Presbyterian family that especially abhorred profanity.

One day little Ruth became exceedingly exasperated with one of her dollies. In her baby vocabulary she could find no words to express adequately her disapproval of dolly's conduct.

Finally, throwing the offending dolly across the room, she cried, feelingly:

"My gracious! I wish I belonged to a family that swore!"

Timely Reminder. "We are still mining ore, growing cotton and manufacturing steel," said the American host.

"Why do you tell me that?" inquired the foreign visitor.

"I just want to remind you that the country is producing something besides politics."

What's the Use? Church—Do you think the world is growing better?

Gotham—I'm afraid not. I read today that a cornet that can be played by a roll of perforated paper, like a piano player, is a recent invention, and I see Evelyn Thw's pictures are coming back in the papers.

BACKACHE NOT A DISEASE

But a Symptom, a Danger Signal Which Every Woman Should Heed.

Backache is a symptom of organic weakness or derangement. If you have backache don't neglect it. To get permanent relief you must reach the root of the trouble. Read about Mrs. Woodall's experience.

Morton's Gap, Kentucky.—"I suffered two years with female disorders, my health was very bad and I had a continual backache which was simply awful. I could not stand on my feet long enough to cook a meal's victuals without my back nearly killing me, and I would have such dragging sensations I could hardly bear it. I had sore-ness in each side, could not stand tight clothing, and was irregular. I was completely run down. On advice I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and am enjoying good health. It is now more than two years and I have not had an ache or pain since. I do all my own work, washing and everything, and never have backache any more. I think your medicine is grand and I praise it to all my neighbors. If you think my testimony will help others you may publish it."—Mrs. OLIVER WOODALL, Morton's Gap, Kentucky.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidentially) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

PRETTY OCTOBER NUPTIALS

A pretty wedding was solemnized at high noon yesterday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Grant when their niece, Miss Jennie Cooper, was united in marriage to Mr. R. C. Keapp.

Promptly at the appointed hour the couple, preceded by the attendants, Mr. John D. Grant, Miss Anna M. Farlong, Mr. James Lashbrook and Miss Nellie Grant, entered the room where the near relatives and friends were gathered in witness the impressive ceremony which was performed by Rev. Spates of Flemingsburg.

After receiving congratulations the happy couple left for a tour over the L. & N.

The bride is a popular and attractive young lady and is one of Mason county's progressive teachers.

The groom, also of the county, is a worthy and enterprising young man.

JUDGE NEWELL SITS IN THE CALLAHAN HEARING

He Passes Until Today the Motions For Bail and a Change of Venue

JACKSON, Ky., October 18th.—Circuit Judge C. D. Newell of Maysville, arrived here today at the 11 o'clock train in obedience to the direction of the Governor, to preside during the preliminary motions in the case of D. F. Deaton and others for the alleged assassination of former Sheriff Ed. Callahan. Judge Newell passed all the motions offered until tomorrow.

Judge Newell called the case at 2 o'clock this afternoon on the writ of habeas corpus directed against A. A. Allen, jailer, and all of the fifteen defendants jointly indicted were brought into Court.

The central figure in the group on the side of the prosecution was the black-robed Mrs. Lillian Gross, only daughter of Ed. Callahan, who sat motionless, but with apparent deep concern.

Robertson's Hickorynut Crop
Mt. Olivet Tribune.

Somebody has made an estimate of the value of Robertson county's hickorynut crop at $2 a bushel and places it at $60,000.

Every hickory tree and bush is loaded with nuts this year. There are also thousands of bushels of black walnuts and butternuts or white walnuts. The hickorynut crop is also full.
